Addison Grange Observes 40th Birthday Friday Evening

Barbara Whitmore Awarded Highest Girl Scout Honor

Presentation of Golden Eagle to be made at Mother and Daughter Banquet Monday night—First time awarded in Addison—Long interested in movement and development of character in younger Scouts aids in securing coveted badge.

Miss Barbara Whitmore, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Matthew Whitmore will be awarded the highest honor in Girl Scoutdom here Monday night at the annual Mother and Daughter banquet. She will receive the golden eaglet, the first ever awarded in Addison, and probably the last owing to changes in the Girl Scouting merit system which will eliminate this coveted honor.

Barbara has well earned her award by her interest in and promoting of Scouting. She first became a Girl Scout when she was invested as a tenderfoot July 8, 1932 while still in the grade schools. She quickly advanced through the various ranks in Scout and acquired 26 merit badges for proficiency in subjects in which girls are interested.

During her summers she spent much time at various camps adding to her fund of Girl Scout, camping and lore knowledge. She attended Camp Conifer at Round Lake, Savona during the summers of 1932 and 1933. The state camp at Sodus Point, Lake Ontario was her vacation camp during the summers of 1934, 1935 and 1936. Barbara spent last summer at the National Girl Scout camp at Camp Andrew Clark. In addition to the above camps she also was at Camp White Oaks in 1934 and 1935 where she was awarded the pine cone pin for outstanding camp spirit in 1934.

Barbara has also been interested in other activities in addition to Girl Scouting for she has spent time at the Women's Christian Association camp at Harris Hill in Elmira, where she was last summer.

In addition she has been active in school affairs, being chosen editor of the Reflector, school paper, by her associates. For the past three years she has won the alumni prize scholarship in Addison High School and with this announcement, her principal Irving R. Gladstone announces for the first time, that she is to be the valedictorian of the class of 1938 of the Addison High School senior class. She plans to enter Cornell University in the fall.

She has been active in church affairs, being a Sunday school teacher and also a representative at the Presbyterian Young People's Conference in Aurora in 1936 and 1937.

In her scouting work she has been actively interested in the development of the younger girls in the troop and leaders point to the fact that she has aided greatly in the development of the troop and its program of activity and advancement.

This highest award in Girl Scouting comes as on honored tribute to her work and interest and is emblematic of the highest type of girl character, citizenship and ability.

Sunday Blizzard Here is Reminder of Storm of '88

The cold, driving snow storm which struck this vicinity Sunday brought prospects of real old March snow storms as they had in days of old, according to some of the older residents of the community who were reminded of storms "when I was a boy".

However, talk of snow storms always brings back the famous storm of 1888 when New York was crippled for several days and snow fighting equipment of the times was impotent. From our own readings and pieced together tales of those who witnessed it, we heard about Roscoe Conklin catching cold and dying as a result of that storm, heard of news of the storm being sent to Boston via London owing to overland wires being down.

That blizzard began the morning of March 12 and for 10 hours unequalled tons of snow fell and aided by a wind, quickly piled into drifts over men's heads and shoulders. Temperature went down and down. Narrow streets were quickly congested. Horse-drawn vehicles slowed down and finally ceased to operate, elevated lines were rendered useless and people were forced to wend their way slowly by foot.

Milk, mail and passenger trains were stopped and a formal paralysis settled over communities. With the food shortages, prices went sky high as profiteers took advantage of human suffering to enrich themselves. Fire-fighting equipment was rendered useless and sanitary conditions became confused and hopeless. In New York alone the damage was estimated at $20,000,000.

Thousands of men were put to work shoveling. Office workers turned too and aided municipal employees in ridding communities of snow. After a week of this monumental work, Dame Nature took pity on her suffering mortals and sent a thaw which melted the snow and two days later activities were normal. All this in the month of March.

Music Groups Give Pleasing Concert in AHS

A good sized crowd enthusiastically endorsed the work of the Addison High School musical units last Friday at the annual concert held in the school auditorium. This was the sixth concert given by the musical groups of the school and the director, Glenn Sprague was showered with praise for the way the fine program was presented. Many of the numbers were exceedingly difficult, yet were presented in a pleasing manner.

The concert was divided into three parts. Four selections were rendered by the school orchestra and four by the high school mixed chorus. The last part of the program was a band concert in which 13 numbers were given. The addition of the kettle drums to the instruments added greatly to the sound effects of the instrumental numbers.

Solo parts in the band concert were played by Edward Sprague, trumpet, John Orr clarinetist and Bill Colburn on the tuba. All were given generous applause.

This annual concert has been a regular spring affair since it was initiated by F. Arden Burt six years ago. It has afforded the Addison music lovers an opportunity to hear the young musicians in a variety of numbers. This annual concert has been one of the factors contributing to the fine growth of the music department in Addison High School.

Mark has been raised abroad and is not considered regular by his young cousins for he just does not fit in. His efforts to become "one of the bunch" furnish many laughs and will give his audience an enjoyable evening.

Woodhull Children Note Spring Signs

The primary room of the local high school, recently enjoyed an excursion to watch for birds and signs of spring. Special note was made of grass, buds, the creek, songs of birds and birds themselves, also the work of a nearby farmer.

Activities, in which the children have engaged this spring, are making bird houses and feeding stations. They were rewarded today by seeing a father and mother bluebird near the playground. Some of the children had never seen a bluebird before. They are hoping that Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird will make their home nearby where they can watch them and study their activities.

Mrs. Bernard Wilson, Mrs. Ivan Tompkins, Mrs. John Hopper, and Miss Dorothy May recently attended a dinner and meeting of the Geneseo Alumni of Steuben County held at the Hotel Wagner, Bath.

Administration forces had supposed the House would pass the bill by a big majority, but anti-administration Democrats are joining the Republicans to fight further extention of executive power.

County Sanatorium Will Become Infirmary

The Steuben County Board of Supervisors at a special meeting last Friday voted 34-1 to discontinue use of Pleasant Valley Sanatorium as a county tuberculosis hospital and convert the institution into an infirmary for county home patients.

The action came as a result of a report submitted by the board's planning committee after the State Department of Social Welfare ordered the ancient structure now used as an infirmary at the county home closed. All members of the board agreed that the present infirmary is unfit for use and should be abandoned.

Supervisor William Newcomb cast the only vote against the resolution turning the sanatorium into an infirmary for indigents. Supervisors Baker and Scudder were absent.

The sanatorium committee was instructed to arrange for transfer of sanatorium patients to other institutions. They will be cared for at state hospitals, the county paying $2.50 per day for those unable to pay for their own care.

Four Swans Sighted On Goodhue Lake

"Believe it or not!" Folk who drove by Goodhue Lake last Sunday looked, rubbed their eyes and looked again almost unable to believe what they saw. For swimming calmly around the north end of the lake were four large, wild swans.

The birds made a beautiful sighting. As far as the writer knows as they sailed majestically on the water, their long necks curving forward and their white bodies riding the water as easily as corks. The birds' bills were jet black. They showed their shyness by sailing to the far side of the lake, but were not badly frightened when the writer stopped his car and walked to the water's edge.

The birds were doubtless migrating As far as the writer knows swans have not been seen in these waters in modern years.

ARE CRIMINALS BORN?

Sunday a brutal murder was committed in Chemung County jail. A jail guard, out of kindness to a prisoner, allowed him to go out of his cell to stretch his legs a few minutes, and the prisoner bashed in the guard's head with an iron pipe. Two men escaped past the body of their victim, but fortunately for society the pair were quickly apprehended and are again in custody awaiting trial for murder instead of burglarly for which they were originally arrested. The pair, two brothers, James and Robert Buck, are hardened criminals even though in years they are only 23 and 21 respectively. The younger brother did the killing.

In reading the history of these Buck boys one is led to meditate the criminals may be born as well as made. It seems that the couple have been in trouble most of their lives. They were arrested in Elmira a short time ago for burglarly after a trail of breaking into buildings that stretched across two states. A third brother, Harvey Buck, age 31, is serving a short sentence in Monroe County penitentiary. That three members of the same family should have been engaged in lives of crime does not seem just circumstantial. There was apparently, something in their blood which gave them these criminal tendencies.

Dr. Wiggan in his Fruit of the Family Tree, points out clear evidence of how strains of bad blood will go down through lines of people for generation after generation, cropping out with flocks of criminals and parasites who live off of society. These examples have been too frequent, too freely delineated in different families to have "just happened". In our own county Judge Pratt has made something of a study of vagrants and criminals who are costing the taxpayers large sums and demoralizing many communities besides. His studies also show this tendency of bad blood to keep cropping out to the detriment of our people.

Some day there will be more widespread acceptance of some of the theories of eugenics, even though the time is not yet ripe for such advanced ideas. Meanwhile there should be a widespread effort on the part of thinking people to stop the propagation of known criminals. It is high time that legislation should be enacted in this state to sterilize criminals of the desperate and the recurrent type. Criminologists agree that there is nothing these people fear so much.

To turn out men from our penitentiaries to become the parents of new generations of thieves and murderers is an excellent way to bring our civilization to an end.

MONEY IN YOUR POCKET

In a recent address, William Leslie, general manager of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, declared that the insuring public is convinced that a rate differential between the safe driver and the driver who has accidents is the proper way to underwrite automobile liability risks. Hundreds of clippings of newspaper editorials, he added, received by the National Bureau since the Safe Driver Reward Plan was first announced, show that this plan "is the stuff a rating plan must be made of, if automobile liability insurance is to be in accord with what the public believes is right."

Under the Safe Driver Reward Plan, which has now gone into effect in the majority of states, car owners insured by any one of a large group of leading stock casualty companies will receive a rebate of part of their premium at the end of the year if they are not involved in a reportable accident. Thus, the safe driver will pay less for his insurance protection, while the dangerous driver will pay a higher rate. As a result, every insured motorist is offered a definite, dollar-and-cents prize for operating his car safely and sanely.

It will be extremely interesting to watch the effect of this on the 1938 accident experience. Continuous efforts are being carried on to awaken all drivers to the social responsibility that falls upon them when they take the wheel of their car. Other efforts are being given toward modernizing and stiffening state traffic codes, and improving the standards of law enforcement. Still other efforts are aimed to better highway and street construction, to eliminate the dangerous "accident prone" location. And now, on top of all this, the motorist has a direct financial interest in getting through the year without accident. Everything that outside agencies can do, in other words, is being done to lower our highway toll. Whether that goal is reached or not is up to the public.

THERE WERE FIVE

It is said down in Washington that over the week-end five Senators switched from opposition to the Re-organization Bill to support it. Those five votes were more than sufficient to give the Administration a majority to pass this controversial measure. The victory goes to the New Deal, yet it was a victory which all honest Americans must believe was won not by right but by the might of money.

Day after day as this battle has raged to give the President more dictatorial power, the agents of the Administration have been putting the screws on this and that Senator to force him into line. The power of patronage finally won. The huge purchasing power of the federal government was swung into the fight by the New Dealers who made promises right and left to the Senators who wavered in their determination to do the right thing. Money, money, money and jobs, jobs, jobs were the lever which pried these weak-kneed, spineless stuffed shirts who represent their states with voices which are nothing except vacuous echoes of their master magician. They shut their eyes to exclude the sight of thousands of telegrams that poured in from their constituents, keeping their ears open to hear the offers of the Roosevelt henchmen who were there to promise anything, everything for the votes needed to put this latest set of shackles upon the people.

It is true that there are departments in the federal government which do need reorganizing. Many a statesman has told us of this fact. But they need to be reorganized by a group of men who have at heart the weeding out of useless bureaus and the cutting off of over-lapping agencies. They need to be reorganized by men who know what the word economy stands for, not by a set of wastrels who have been driving us along the hard road towards national bankruptcy for five years.

What does the President care about economy? It is doubtful if he has the slightest idea what the word really means. Before he was elected the first time Roosevelt raised his tutored Harvard accent in holy horror at the great cost of government under the Hoover administration. According to him we were facing a calamity unless the spending stopped, and he was to be the man to stop it. He stopped it just like the man who stopped his car by going out of low gear into high. Nobody in the history of the world in peace time ever saw money spent as it has been spent during the Roosevelt Administration. And now he has become so intoxicated with the mere spending of the people's money that he recently made a statement that the cost of federal expenditures could not be reduced much below seven billions a year. This is a far cry from those radio addresses in which he blamed Hoover for extravagance.

Meanwhile, as the President has been marshaling the forces of patronage to buy votes for his reorganization scheme, what has been going on in the country? Well every school child is becoming aware of what is happening. The Roosevelt depression which took hold of the country last fall when the president called in Congress for a special session to consider new crack-pot legislation, has been gathering in an ever blackening cloud which now shrouds the country from Maine to California. Business men are frank to admit it is getting worse than the depression which started with the world cataclysm in 1929. Unemployment has been growing by leaps and bounds until the millions out of work equal the unemployed when the Roosevelt Administration started. And what does the President do about it? He fiddles while Rome burns. He shouts in a rain barrel that there isn't any depression—this is only a temporary "recession", and tries to make himself believe business is to blame for this thing, whatever the name.

The depression deepens, and the only tangible thing this Administration has done is to keep seeking more power, more power. Getting power through the Reorganization Bill by buying the weak sisters of the Senate with patronage promises. Even some of the staunchest supporters of the President in 1933 are now pointing the finger of scorn at his lack of initiative in this crisis.

What of the five Senators who switched? They too shall probably have their reward. They can look in the mirror and face the slinking cowards who swore to support the Constitution of the United States, and then sold their oaths for a handful of Farley patronage.

FIFTY RULES ON FIRE

It used to be said that boys playing with matches often caused bad fires. And events here the past few days leads one to remark on the truth of that other old saying, "men are just boys grown tall".

The fact is the Addison Fire Department has been called out several times recently to combat grass fires which were threatening local houses. Why did the siren blow and the trucks make runs to distant parts of the village? In most cases the reason can be attributed to plain carelessness. Dead grass becomes bone dry at this time of year, and fires that are not carefully watched will spread rapidly. When bonfires are started on windy, spring days the person who strikes the match never knows where his blaze will stop.

There are fifty rules against starting fires on windy, spring days. The first rule is DON'T Obey this one rule and never mind the other forty-nine.

The Reorganization Bill

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

IF THE bill for the Reorganization of the Executive passes in its present form we shall have gone a long way toward establishing authoritarian government in the United States. Congress will have decreed its own partial abdication, and fixed it so that one-third of that body can permanently prevent the full Congressional power from ever being recaptured. Thus, from interpreting democracy to mean the uncontrolled will of the majority, we shall have passed to interpreting it as meaning the power of one-third of the people's representatives to block the will of the other two-thirds.

The events of the last fortnight, all over the world, have occupied the front page headlines. The repercussion from them has stupefied us all. But we have got to continue to keep our eyes open, and, for the moment, turn them again toward Washington. For this proposal to reorganize the executive branch of the government is at least as revolutionary as the Supreme Court bill, and, in my opinion, even more dangerous to representative, democratic government. And unless there is a howl from the country within the next few days, this bill, which is now before the Senate, is very likely to pass.

That the whole structure of our administrative system needs overhauling and reforming is beside the point at this moment. What we really need, and need desperately, is an extension, not a diminishing, of Congressional control and the erection of a more efficient apparatus for that purpose.

This bill moves in exactly the opposite direction. It gives the President complete power over the bureaus, the agencies and the public corporations, which, with their immense funds and their immense powers, have the capacity to make or break the economic and social structure of the country, and under this bill the President will be subject to less supervision than is given to the head of any private corporation in the United States.

He will be given the power "to transfer, regroup, co-ordinate, consolidate, reorganize or abolish" all of the administrative agencies. This might conceivably be a desirable move for greater efficiency, provided that some check, somewhere, is exercised by the representatives of the people. But the joker lies in the President's veto power. Under this law he can issue an edict with regard to all these agencies. If Congress does not disapprove within sixty days the edict becomes law. If it does disapprove, its disapproval is subject to Presidential veto. And it will then take a two-thirds majority of Congress to override him!

If Congress checks the President the President can recheck Congress, and all he needs is one-third of Congress to overrule the majority.

Senator Wheeler proposed an amendment to overcome this. Under his amendment, the President would still have been given reorganization powers, but Congressional approval would be required. This would have preserved majority rule.

It was generally believed that Senator Wheeler's amendment would pass. But the pressure exerted by the Administration and Mr. Farley upon legislators never abates for a moment, whether the pressure of holding or withdrawing support in the oncoming Congressional elections, or the pressure for holding or bestowing patronage. Senator Wheeler's amendment was defeated by four votes. Now there is nothing left except to defeat the bill as a whole, and draft another and better one.

This bill must not pass. If it does, we shall have created a means whereby one man, once elected President, can rule this country with a camarilla. If we create those means, sooner or later, they will be used.

Democratic government is on the defensive in every country in the world. It has been overthrown in state after state. And in not one single country has it been overthrown by violent revolution. The revolutions which have already dethroned the people have all been accomplished by breaking down the democratic process, destroying democratic checks, and thus opening the gates for the aggrandizement of executive power, first over the people's representatives, and, eventually, over the people's lives. This has been the history of every anti-democratic revolution, from Mussolini's coup d'etat in 1922, to the final collapse of every pretense of freedom, in Austria a few days ago.

In the near future I will discuss more in detail the various features of the reorganization bill conceding, as we all must, that there is a genuine need for a reform of the executive branch of the government, and that even the present bill has its points. But as it stands it is simply terrible.

If Congress doesn't stop it the people must stop it, as they stopped the bill for the reorganization of the Supreme Court. By personal expression in telegrams to their representatives. Today. Now.

Retail Trade

Reports from various sections of the country indicate that retail business generally is running 11-12 per cent under March last year. This is partly due to the fact that this year Easter falls on April 17 while last year it came on March 28. Sales of automobiles are about 15 per cent under last year while restaurant and drug business is reported from 5 to 7 per cent under 1937. While sales in men's wear stores are sharply lower, it is estimated that the combined March-April volume will be off only 10 per cent. Sale of low-priced dresses and suits increased last week in department and specialty stores and will undoubtedly improve further as Easter approaches.

Mr. Roosevelt Undermines The T. V. A.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THE President has put himself in a position where if he wins on the narrow issue of his right to remove Dr. Morgan, he loses on the much broader issue presented by the Tennessee Valley Authority. If ever there was a case of a man sacrificing a big purpose to a little one, it is revealed by the transcript of Mr. Roosevelt's investigation on Monday.

It shows Mr. Roosevelt contending on the one hand that a director of T. V. A. is like "any subordinate in the executive branch of the government," and contending, on the other hand, that T. V. A. is "a great experiment in government." Mr. Roosevelt made both contentions with equal assurance, apparently entirely unaware that if he succeeds in proving that Dr. Morgan is a mere subordinate, he has sacrificed the essential principle which makes T. V. A. a great experiment in government.

Mr. Roosevelt's position at the moment is that T. V. A. is an example of government ownership and operation differing in no fundamental respect from the Postoffice. Yet the whole claim that T. V. A. is a new experiment in government depends upon a demonstration that the Authority is a fundamentally different thing from an ordinary government department. And so if Mr. Roosevelt succeeds in proving that he has the right to remove Dr. Morgan as he might remove Mr. Farley, he will have cut the ground away from under the feet of those friends of T. V. A. who look upon it as the prototype of a new and promising form of public enterprise. No enemy of the T. V. A. could do the experiment a more devastating injury. And the more conclusively the President wins his personal controversy, the more completely he sacrifices his larger aims.

For what is there about T. V. A. that makes it a great experiment in government? Is it not that Congress created a new type of government agency, so designed that to the agency there could be delegated a great deal of legislative power and to it could be entrusted a vast property in one of the great river valleys? From the start it was supposed to be clear to the President as it was clear to Congress, and as it was clear to every informed observer, that such legislative power and such administrative control of natural resources could not and should not be lodged in an ordinary government department.

Yet now Mr. Roosevelt, having become embroiled in a conflict of personalities, is doing everything he can to prove false the whole argument that T. V. A. is a new type of government agency suited to carrying out a new kind of government function.

A wise and true friend of this great experiment would never have let the personal issues, or his own immediate feelings, divert him from the main point—from the necessity of proving by this great experiment that it is in fact possible to create a new arm of government, to endow it with subsidiary legislative power, to invest it with the control and management of great national properties, and to keep it separate and distinct from the ordinary departments of government which are under partisan and Executive control. Far from reaching out for the power to prove that Dr. Morgan is like a mere postmaster, Mr. Roosevelt, if he had not forgotten his greater objectives, would have been bent on proving the exact opposite. He would have insisted on demonstrating that so much power can safely be vested in an Authority of this sort precisely because the directors are not ordinary subordinates.

For if he succeeds in what he is doing now, does he suppose that the people will look with favor on the idea of entrusting all the other great river valleys to mere subordinates of the President? Does he suppose Congress will give to subordinate executive officials the authority to legislate for and to administer the natural resources of the nation? And if he looks ahead a little and sees, as he surely must, that the day may not be far off when the railroads might have to be nationalized, does he not see that what he is doing now raises almost insuperable objections to the extension of public ownership?

One is left wondering whether Mr. Roosevelt has any genuine understanding of the great reform which he has initiated. For in this case certainly he has let his short, narrow and personal view as an individual obscure and perhaps defeat his longer purposes as a statesman. Though he thinks he is safeguarding his experiment, he is injuring it vitally, and by allowing himself to be confused by the small change of a personal controversy, he is being penny wise and pound foolish.

Open Deer Season For Steuben and Southern Tier

Deer have become so numerous in the southern tier of New York counties that a six-day open season, December 1 to 7 (Sunday excluded) in Broome, Cortland, Livingston, Steuben and Wyoming Counties was authorized at the last session of the Legislature. The bill is now before the Governor for signature.

Conditions which resulted in this extension of open deer territory are discussed in the following extract from a letter recently written by N. Marks Bump of Binghamton, chairman of the legislative committee of the New York State Conservation Council. He said:

"There has been a lot of discussion for the last couple of years or more at Albany and throughout the state with regard to deer. One of the most striking facts in this part of the country has been the enormous increase in the number of deer in various localities and their spread through agricultural territory. In Pennsylvania, for example, a survey conducted thirty years ago showed only a few specimens of white tailed deer. Today, through efficient management, that state is estimated to have a herd of more than 250,000 In New York State there are probably more deer at the present time than ever before. If the herd becomes much greater there will be severe and dangerous competition in the coverts and deer will be forced to compete with farm stock as well as other forms of wild life in the search for food.

Baseball team managers of the vicinity are invited to attend a meeting of managers for the formation of a league. The meeting is to be held in Woodhull I. O. O. F. hall Sunday afternoon. Robert Drake is in charge of the meeting as temporary chairman and organizer. It is hoped to form a league something like the Little Six League which has been prevalent in this vicinity in former years. However, if there are enough entrants the league will not be limited to six teams. Each team seeking admission must submit a roster of 18 players in order to be eligible. Many of the teams will submit lists which will not be complete until the closing of the scholastic and collegiate years as they will draw their personnel from former high school players and graduating students from high schools.

Dairymen's League to Distribute $3,100,000

New York—Approximately $3,100,000 in cash will be distributed to members of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association and other holders of the association's certificates of indebtedness during the next few weeks. This announcement is made by J. A. Coulter of Watertown, treasurer of the association following recent action taken by the League board of directors.

This large amount of money which will be distributed to thousands of dairy farmers in every section of the New York milk shed, represents full payments on one series of certificates three years ahead of due date and payment of approximately half of another series five years before due date. It also includes $600,000 for May 1 interest coupons on all outstanding series of League certificates. This interest payment six weeks ahead of time was announced by the association two weeks ago.

The action taken by the League's directors calls for payment at par with interest to May 1st on all "series 1941" certificates and all of "series 1943" certificates whose numbers end with the numerals 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5. The outstanding "41s" which are not due for three years total about $1,400,000. The total outstanding of "43s" due in five years is about $2,250,000. On three occasions in previous years the association has called certain series of certificates as a means of keeping its capital funds adjusted more closely to current needs of the organization.

LET'S PLAY A GAME

DOWN YOU GO: The players stand in two opposite lines, and are asked a list of questions that they should know. When a person can not answer, he sits down. The object of the game is to see how many persons remain standing by the time the list of questions is exhausted.

Easy questions should be asked first so that everyone will answer correctly; this gives them confidence. Four-H club members may be asked questions about their projects, seeds, farm machinery, fruits and vegetables.

IMPROMPTU DRAMATICS Everyone likes to "act" a part. The players may form groups and act the title of a book, a nursery rhyme a song or some event that has recently happened to the club or community. Each group performs before the rest who guess what the action represents.

Variation: The leader calls upon one or more persons in a group to get up and act some scene, such as "A politician the day after he has won the election". "A girl who is trying to squelch a forward young man," or "A superstitious negro in a cemetery."

This Week In Sports

By the Grandstander

From the Grandstander's seat this week it looks as tho the Addison Merchants were going into second place for the second half of the New York-Penn basketball league. The boys gave some good exhibitions of basketball and defeated the leaders in some of the contests. They can feel pretty good over their season's results on the basis of victories.

—o—

Coach Miller has started his baseball charges at work in the open air. The first squad try-outs were held during the past week. A good sized squad appeared for the practice sessions and many varsity members are in the working, which augurs good for a successful season.

—o—

Western collegiate wrestlers proved too strong grapplers for the eastern collegiate champs Saturday at the matches held at Penn State. Lehigh and Harvard each placed one man in the finals but Oklahoma and Big 10 wrestlers took the gravy.

—o—

It looks as tho the Cardinals farming system does not meet the approval of the league teams according to protests filed with Commissioner Landis. Should he decide against the Cards, there will be a lot of footloose teams and players from minor leagues sponored by the St. Louis squad.

—o—

Ken Armstrong, who is not particularly considered a Boston Bee fan called my attention this week to the fact that the Bees are stepping in front in exhibition games as nitless wonders, having scored several games on few hits but making them count, while the opposition piled up twice as many hits but could not make them count.

—o—

Canisius College is battling with Fordham and Notre Dame for name honors with the following in the line-up: Custodi, Coniglio, Mazuca, Azzo, Zolnoski, Marinaccio, Oswaykus and Soroka.

—o—

Winter sports awards were given 128 at Cornell over the past weekend. The sports represented were: Hockey, swimming, boxing, wrestling, basketball, soccer, crew, golf, fencing and football.

—o—

The sum of $8,057,600 was divided among 1,772 winners in the Irish sweepstakes last week. There were 5,492,004 ticket out, so the percentage of winners was pretty small if you sit down to figure it out. The receipts were $13,730,010.

—o—

St. Louis baseball fans have laid down a set of rules for the baseball season. Among them are: free box scores to all in the grandstand, all games to start at 2:30 to make it possible to be home in time for dinner, no cancellation of games on the slightest pretext of rain to pile up week-end double-headers, employ more workers to eliminate crowding at the gates at game time.

—o—

The big money Yankees are in for some criticism around the circuit owing to the amount of money poured into the team and the gate receipts received. Both sums are larger than any other team in the league and hence the dissatisfaction. Someone suggested taking the Yankees out of the American League to give the others a chance.

—o—

And speaking of big money players, there is a growing tendency among big league scouts and teams to search the back lots and colleges for material, with the colleges having a great edge. It is felt that it is much cheaper to develop a collegiate player than buy a star, who many times proves a bust.

—o—

Joe DiMaggio is still a hold-out from the Yankee camp. and Lou Gehrig is out with a hand injury. However, this does not affect his playing record as exhibition games are not considered part of the regular playing season's work.

—o—

This season's crop of holdouts is about the slimmest there has been in many seasons. There are a few outstanding but many of the former stars who are holding out have been issued an "or else" ultimatum and have joined the ranks. It is tough to turn down $10,000 for a season, especially in these days of recession. ords. rcmfwtamfdtmfwtfftfhfcmfwm

—o—

Syracuse U baseball hopes are somewhat dimmed by the loss of Catcher Bill Fitzpatrick, who recently underwent an operation.

Football writers have additional work cut out for them this year owing to many colleges adopting spring football practice.

PAUL SMITH APPOINTED STATE FAIR DIRECTOR

Noyes of the Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Investigations

While the government spent the imposing sum of $1,500,000 to investigate the American Telephone & Telegraph company, according to press reports, the burden of fact finding and presentation of testimony cost the telephone company twice that much or $3,000,000. All this despite the obvious fact that the American public gets better telephone service at less cost than any nation in the world. Now another drag-net investigation is about to begin. This time its the Aluminum Company of America. The monopoly suit of the Department of Justice will come to trial in U. S. District Court May 2. According to counsel who were present last week when the date was set, the trial is expected to draw out for from three to six months. The government has already asked 2,000 questions and is planning to study thousands of documents all, of course, at the taxpayers expense.

"Behind the Scenes In American Business"

By Orton B. Potter

Business

New York, Mar. 28—The most important business news last week was the action of the Senate Finance Committee in abolishing the undistributed profits tax and making extensive modifications in the capital gains tax. These two moves will go far toward easing the oppressive tax burden on business. Small companies with incomes less than $25,000 will be favored under the new bill and will pay less than the flat 18 per cent levied upon larger companies. General business continues depressed and earnings for the first three months of 1938 will be considerably under last year. Stock, bond and commodity markets were sharply lower last week. This writer believes that confidence will gradually be built up now that the "war on taxes" has begun in earnest. Better times are ahead in America, not behind it.

Washington

There is a growing feeling in Congress that the country has legislated itself into a depression. "Let's cut out the monkey-shines and get back to the things we know" seems to be the current sentiment. Unsound laws designed to ruin business rather than help it, such as the proposal to tax chain stores out of existence and throw another million men out of work, only add to the fear complex that has dammed up the flow of new capital into business channels. The President's ouster of Chairman Arthur Morgan of the TVA and the coming Congressional investigation of the administration's pet utility project was the most important Washington development last week.

During the month of February Brazil, one of the world's greatest coffee producing countries burned 721,000 bag of coffee according to a report from the New York Coffee Exchange. Since last July more than 11,000,000 bags have been burned and more than 58,500,000 bags have been destroyed since the destruction of the surplus coffee crop program started in 1931. This is enough to fill the coffee cups of the world for more than two full years. Destruction of the things nature provides such as cotton, wheat, little pigs and coffee seems a strange way to create prosperity.

Peanut Business

Few persons realize that the growing of peanuts in America is a $50,000,000 business which outranks silver mining before it was subsidized by the government. In addition to being sold both in shelled and unshelled form, peanuts find their way into candy bars, peanut butter and peanut oil, which replaces cotton seed oil in many industrial uses. Contrary to popular belief peanuts grow on plants rather than on trees. The peanut ripens underground and the plant is then uprooted and dried. More than a billion and a quarter pounds of peanuts are grown in American annually mostly in Virginia, North Carolina and Alabama.

Addison Merchants Tie Reformatory Boys — Lose to Cross Road Cubs

An overtime tie is unusual but the Addison Merchants and the New York State Reformatory at Elmira had one that ended at 60 up last Saturday. A fast game with few fouls and clean sportsmanship combined to make one of the evenest and best games of the season. The lead was in the Reformatory possession till the final minutes of the fourth quarter when the Villagers made 14 points in three minutes to tie it at 54 all. In the overtime period a collision between Heidrick and a rival player as they bent over to pick up a free ball resulted in a serious cut over Heidrick's left cheek bone. He was taken to the Reformatory hospital for treatment, three stitches were needed to close the wound.

The Addisonites greatly appreciated the support and applause they got from the 1,800 spectators. The local team was given supper after the game and according to the local basketeers the food was excellent.

Another overtime game was lost to the Cross Road Cubs at Troy, Pa. A close victory was taken by the Cubs last Friday. Strong of the Cross Road team was called from the game by the four-foul route but was allowed to play the rest of the game as the Cubs had but five men eligible for service. Robbins with 22 points led the Addison scoring. Walker with 15 led the Cross Road quintet.

"Behind the Scenes In American Business"

By Orton B. Potter

Things to Watch For

More men's shoes in color next fall . . . Three dimensional movies now being experimented with by Warner Brothers . . . Motor trucks powered by steam engines which will be manufactured by former employees of the old Stanley Steamer Company . . . Midget fire sprinkling systems for private homes and apartments which will automatically flood the rooms with water when fire breaks out . . . Victrola record-of-the-month club . . . A new type of office furniture which never needs dusting for use in modern air conditioned offices.

Do You Know

That Japan is collecting China's junk for shooting it back upon Chinese civilians in the form of shells . . . That more than $50,000,000 of American investment in China have already been destroyed by the Japs . . . That one of the most successful large department stores in New York, Bonwit Teller, is operated by a woman, Mrs. Hortense M. Odlum . . . That more than 30,000 persons a day are hurt in accidents in this country . . . That 8,000,000 are currently deriving the major part of their income from government or state funds . . . That more than ten billion pounds of soap are produced and consumed annually by the civilized world, but a quarter of the people in the world never use soap . . . That the average woman washes an acre of dirty dishes and scrubs five miles of dirty floors every year.

Future Jobs

Young men with technical leanings are finding opportunities today to develop their talents in the booming air conditioning industry. Tho the industry is still believed to be in its infancy, its leaders are apparently determined that there shall be no shortage in manpower to operate the business as it grows. This was emphasized last week when the Carrier Corporation announced that 109 graduates of its first class in air conditioning had been placed in engineering jobs.

There is a little news item in this week's paper relative to Gilbert Brewster hitch hiking his way through many states. He added much to his general store of knowledge by stopping off in cities where important industries are located and learning by seeing how things are made. I remember a prof. in college used to tell us to get out and bum a year before you settle down to your life's work for the experience and appreciation of life it gives you.

This has been a great week for Barbara Whitmore, what with a Golden Eaglet, highest Girl Scout award and the annuoncement that she is the valedictorian of her class in high school. The Rambler congratulates her and wishes her the same success in her other ventures in life as she has had in scholastic and Scout activities. With the same work she should go far in life.

However, I cannot let the crack get away at this time. As a good Syracusan I see where she has chosen Cornell for matriculation in the fall. I realize that I'm completely surrounded by Cornellians and will probably rue the remark, but Barbara why in the world pick Cornell with such a good university as Syracuse right handy. And if you don't believe me, that it is good ask Ida Haweeli, Betty Finnerty, or Charlie Crane. All outstanding in the community.

—o—

Ahem! That will cost you a quarter Folks.

—o—

One of the local loungers was observed primping in a pocket mirror in the post office during the past week. A man too reminded me of the dandies seen in books of old.

—o—

The many accidents and deaths caused in the woods about here recently have caused thinking woodsmen to stop and think. Accidents do not just happen, there are caused and good woodsmen should remove the causes before they go to work. Trees in the vicinity of the work should be investigated for loose branches before the work starts, plenty of rope should be had to tie fast trees so they will not fall before the woodsman wills them so and other safety and precautionary measures should be taken. It takes a little more time but there would be fewer accidents.

—o—

Several local telephone subscribers were somewhat chagrined during the past week when their telephone service was cut off and attempts to call them were met with the words "service temporarily discontinued."

—o—

Another sign of spring. Peepers are being heard along east Front Street, Steuben Street and upper Tuscarora Street. On a still, starlight night they add something to the stillness of the air which sounds reassuring.

—o—

Beware of April Fool's day tomorrow, Friday. In days of old, and prior to the wars in Europe, when people were happy and carefree, great parades of mummers and clowns were held in All Fools Day. It would be well if the spirits of fun and frolic were again rampant instead of the Sons of Mars.

—o—

Despite notes and words to the contrary business conditions still remain poor. Word has been received here from many of the larger communities throughout the state that wages are dropping or disappearing, men are still being laid off and the unemployment situation remains acute.

—o—

There is still time to think about the various cleanup jobs that are needed about your place to make Addison more attractive during the summer months.

—o—

Merchants Basketball players are sold on the idea of going to the Elmira Reformatory. Saturday nite they played the team of that place to a 60 to 60 tie in an overtime period. This was not the highlight of the trip however. This came in the form of thick, creamy pineapplie pie. The boys are not over talking about that pie yet and feel that that would be a good place to go. They received wonderful treatment there from everyone.

—o—

That's all.

Legion Sponsors Five Youths to Run State During Fair Week

Five Steuben County boys will be given an opportunity to learn practical lessons in citizenship and act as mayors of prominent cities and also as governor of New York State for a time at the Syracuse State Fair this summer. The American Legion is sponsoring the affair and Irving R. Gladstone, principal of Addison High School, is general chairman for Steuben County.

The boys to be chosen must meet the following qualifications: Be a junior in high school, have a scholastic standing that makes him in the first 50 per cent of his class, be 15 to 17 years of age, of good health and moral character, have demonstrated executive ability and good sportsmanship.

Each boy will pay an entrance fee of $15, which is expected to be provided by a sponsoring organization in the community from which the boys come. Transportation will be provided as well as food and medical attention. Each boy will bring his own bedding.

Outstanding boy leaders will conduct classes in various phases of city and state government during the week of July 10 to 18, when the boys will be housed on the fair grounds. Elections, such as conducted throughout the state, will be held and students or boy leaders chosen to head the municipal and state governments. There will be athletic competitions and recreational programs also.

TWO DOGS DIE OF TRAIN INJURIES

Two pet dogs were killed in this village during the past week and their loss is mourned by their owners. The first was last Thursday morning when a dog's front leg was found on the west bound Erie track. Search for the animal failed to reveal its where abouts. Monday the dog was discovered lying in the grass on the north side of the track and when its owner was notified, he requested Herman Brownell to shoot the animal. Frank Crane of Goodhue Hill was the owner.

The second dog, was also struck by a train. This was Rex, the dog owned by Llewellyn Towner, Sr. Jerry Gardner, towerman, stated the dog ran under a passing freight train and was killed instantly. Chief Bovee removed the body and buried it.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Youth Training Free at State School by NYA

Young men are now being selected from those employed on National Youth Administration projects in New York State to participate in the resident training center opening up April 1 to 15 at five of the state agricultural schools, Alfred, Delhi, Cobleskill, Farmingdale and Morrisville. The young men will work at NYA construction projects at the schools 54 hours each month thereby earning enough for board and room on a cooperative basis and for $5 a month pocket money; they will be able to secure 80 hours class work and shop instruction each month in such courses as their ability and occupational choice indicate as valuable, agricultural courses, the industrial and technical courses just established this year, and special courses developed for NYA youths.

In selecting youths for these resident training centers, Karl D. Hesley, State NYA Director, said: "Rural youths and those in smaller communities are the ones who can gain most from this opportunity to attend the state agricultural schools. While the schools are tuition-free, the fact remains that many a young man is unable to avail himself of the excellent courses offered simply because he lacks money for board and room. This is especially true of youths employed on NYA projects in rural areas. As valuable as the actual studies in the schools in helping these young people develop into skillful farmers, good workmen, and trained craftsmen will be the experience which they will get on the construction projects set up in each school".

At the New York State School at Alfred, University, Paul B. Orvis director, the NYA youths will build farm shops, wire farm and shops for electricity, mount motors and install electrical equipment for lighting, refrigeration, air-conditioning, etc.

Special efforts have been made by the different schools to furnish living accommodations for NYA youths who will attend the agricultural schools. It is estimated that the first group to benefit from resident training centers at the agricultural schools will number around 150.

A cooperative dormitory will be operated at Alfred Station about one mile from the school; a vacant inn will be rented and will be furnished as complete living quarters for NYA youth.

BRASS TACKS
For POULTRY RAISERS
By BURTON P. THARP

Chicken Fever

For the past few months particularly January, February and March the commercial poultry farmer has been hard at it with his spring flock of young chicks. He may be regarded as the chronic case. The remainder of us have the disease in the acute form. Some of us are almost cured by the time we wade through a few light snows to the chicken coop to thaw frozen water dishes. By the first of January many resolutions are in order in which we resolve never to raise another chick.

The first pleasant days of March find us with another severe shot of the malady in which we break down and order a batch of day-old chicks or set a hen and fidget 21 days.

A great deal of satisfaction can be derived from a small backyard flock. With reasonable care 12 or 15 pullets will provide all the eggs necessary for the average family. An occasional chicken dinner can be indulged in without planking down a dollar or more at the time. A small flock of this kind should more than pay for their feed in the eggs and meat they furnish in the course of a year.

There may be in your neighborhood breeding flocks of the breed you would like to raise or if you would like some unusual breed you can find most any breed advertised in poultry magazines on the local newstand. Both hatching eggs and day-old chicks are available in most any breed which may take your fancy.

If you decide on a few setting eggs and hatch them with hens you should be able to purchase some good sitting hens from farmers in the neighborhood at reasonable prices because sitting hens are a liability to most farmers who have large flocks.

Rhode Island Reds, Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes make excellent sitting hens. Select hens that are not too heavy and not easily excited. Place the hens in their new quarters at night and with as little handling as possible. Leave them several days to get used to their new environment.

The nest should be made of straw or similar material on several inches of moist earth. The nest should be roomy and the edges should be low to prevent breakage of eggs when the hen steps into it. Twelve to fifteen eggs is plenty for one hen especially in cold weather. After providing water and grain once a day and a good place to dust, disturb as little as possible. Always dust sitting hens with a louse powder before setting whether lice appear or not.

Forest Fires On Increase

There is a strong tendency toward the increase in the occurrence of forest fires in the State of New York said Kinne F. Williams, head of the forest fire control work in the State of New York, in a talk to the student body of the New York State College of Forestry, Syracuse University, March 23.

"Comparing the five year period, 1932-1936, with the one immediately preceding, there was more than a fifty per cent increase which can be explained only by the increasing recreational use and a prolonged period of drought. High fire hazards alone do not create our fire losses. It is our experience that during periods of high fire losses when it has become necessary to close the forest to the public, there has been an immediate cessation in the occurrence of fires while there was no diminution in the inflammability of the forest. Further evidence is the fact that posted land, even including those lands of fire hazards, is peculiarly immune of fires at all times. We only have heavy losses in forest fires during periods of high inflammability and the prence of groups of individuals lacking all conception in the danger of the careless use of fire in the open."

Mr. Williams gave a few timely hints as to how people in the woods should handle fire. He urged that every person before throwing away a match should break it between his fingers. This would insure the match being entirely out because a lighted match could not be conveniently broken between the fingers. Grind into the ground cigarette butts with the heel or toe of the shoe and be sure the butts are completely extinguished. Camp fires should never be built on the soft duff of the forest floor. All material of that kind should be removed until the mineral soil is exposed and when a camp fire is being abandoned it should be thoroughly quenched with water. Grass fires, said Mr. Williams, cause a great deal of damage because they result in forest fires or the destruction of property. They are also very destructive to wild life, especially many species of birds which make their nests in the open fields.

Farmers Advised to Keep Appointments

Farms entered in the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program will be grouped according to the type of agriculture normally followed for that farm. It is estimated that potato, wheat and tobacco farms will have work sheets filed by April 15.

Field supervisors are filing data now for farmers who have grown tobacco since 1914 or who normally grow more than three acres of potatoes or who ordinarily sell 100 bushels of wheat. One hundred two such work sheets were made out the first two days of the filing period. Work sheets for all other type farms will follow and an early completion date is anticipated.

Payments under the 1935 program will be made for growing 94% of the normal potato acreage on potato farms, also provision is made for a wheat payment on wheat farms. In addition substantial allowances are made for carrying out approved soil building practices on each farm, such as approved clover seeding and approved lime and superphosphate applications, and several other practices.

Every farmer will have an opportunity to file a work sheet and thereby participate in the program. All 1937 participants will receive notice of appointments with field supervisors, but all others will request such an appointment with their local Agricultural Conservation supervisor. New men only will be requested to furnish farm maps and a list of crop acreage.

Appointments may be made at the Agricultural Conservation Office at Bath or with one of the supervisors. In charge of work sheet data for townships of Prattsburg, Pulteney and Avoca is Leon Lewis, Prattsburg; Wayland and Cohocton townships, David Fronk, Cohocton; Wheeler and Howard, Walter Pierce, Bath; Bath, Cameron, Campbell and Thurston, Charles Wightman, Bath; Lindley, Hornby, Erwin, Corning and Caton, Leo Gorges, Lindley, Addison, Rathbone Tuscarora and Woodhull, Richard Stowell, Lindley; Wayne, Urbana and Bradford, H. How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Papering the Walls

Miss M. C., asks about papering the walls in a stone house without heat throughout the winter.

Professor A. M. Goodman of the department of agricultural engineering answers: "Before papering the house, we recommend heat in the house for a week or so during cold weather. It is also well to open the windows for fresh air during the heating so the walls will be thoroughly dry.

"This is particularly important if old paper must be removed; however, if it is necessary to wet the paper to remove it, keep the windows and doors closed so the air will remain more humid.

"After the papering is done, it is well to keep heat in the house for a week or ten days, giving the rooms a good chance to dry."

Growing Peas

C. G., asks for suggestions on growing peas.

E. C. Minnum of the department of vegetable crops replies: "Whether grown for home or market, select varieties that succeed each other during the all-too-short season. Plant three or four varieties at the same time and as early as possible.

"Many gardeners do not know that peas will germinate at temperatures slightly above freezing and that they should be planted as soon as the ground can be worked in the spring.

"Peas do not yield heavily in hot weather; in fact, some varieties will show blasted or dead blossoms in hot weather."
